This period not only reshaped Delhi's political landscape but also challenged traditional political norms across the country, making 2013 a pivotal year of political realignment and grassroots activism.

Overview of the Political Climate in 2013

Pre-2013 Political Scenario

Before 2013, Indian politics was largely dominated by the Congress and the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), with regional parties playing crucial roles in coalition governments. The political discourse was often characterized by corruption allegations, bureaucratic inefficiencies, and a lack of direct engagement with common citizens. Delhi, being the national capital, was no exception to these issues, with residents longing for transparent governance and effective leadership.

The Emergence of Arvind Kejriwal

Arvind Kejriwal, a former Indian Revenue Service officer and a social activist, rose to prominence through his involvement in the anti-corruption movement led by Anna Hazare. His activism, especially the campaign against corruption in the government, garnered widespread public support. By late 2012 and early 2013, Kejriwal transitioned from activism to electoral politics, founding the Aam Aadmi Party in November 2012, with a clear agenda of transparency, anti-corruption measures, and citizen-centric governance.

- Use of Social Media for Political Gain: While innovative, some critics argued it was a calculated move to manipulate public opinion and create sensationalism.
- Short-Term Alliances: Forming quick alliances with other parties to gain power, which raised questions about political stability and sincerity.
- Claiming Moral High Ground: Positioning themselves as the clean alternative often involved aggressive rhetoric against opponents, sometimes bordering on populism.

- Aam Aadmi Party: 28 seats

Though AAP fell just short of a majority, its impressive performance signaled a shift in voter sentiment. Kejriwal was invited to form a government but resigned after 49 days due to the inability to pass key legislation, leading to fresh elections later that year.
